

4 FIRE DEPTS. BATTLE HOTEL BLAZE

INJURIES OF FALL PROVE FATAL TO MOKENA CITIZEN

Mrs. Nettie E. Scheiblich, 70 years old, a life long resident of Mokena, died at the Silver Cross hospital Saturday morning following injuries sustained in a fall into an outdoor pool in her garden a few weeks ago.

Death resulted from complications. Mrs. Scheiblich was a very enthusiastic worker in the Christian Science circles.

Surviving are two sons, Andrew C. and Howard W., three grand daughters, 2 brothers, Chas. and Edw. Stoll and a sister Mrs. Chas. H. MacNeil. The body was taken from the Sonntag funeral home in Joliet to her home in Mokena where Christian Science services were held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Burial was made in the St. John's cemetery Mokena.

COMMUNITY CHEST DRIVE BEGINS FRIDAY

The annual Will County Community Chest drive gets under way Friday of this week. The campaign ends November 22nd.

HAS HAND INJURED IN PICKUP BALER WHILE MACHINE WAS IN GEAR

George Marti of Mokena while operating a pickup baler on the James Tilsy farm suffered quite severe injuries to his right hand last Wednesday while trying to make adjustments on the machine while it was in gear. He was taken to the Silver Cross hospital where 25 stitches were taken to close the wound. He is getting along nicely at latest reports.

CHOSEN FOR HONORS IN NATIONAL 4H GARDEN CONTEST

Wallace Deeke, of Arlington Heights, Cook County, whose ability in keeping his own account records landed him the job of looking after his father's farm account book, has been chosen as the Illinois candidate for honors in the national 4H garden contest, according to state 4H club officials at the University of Illinois College of Agriculture.

Wallace graduated from the Arlington Heights high school last year and has been a member of the Elk Grove 4H club for seven years. He is 18 years old and the son of Edwin Deeke who owns a 60-acre truck farm.

Starting in 1937 with a quarter-acre plot, the youth has increased his garden each year until this year it included two acres. During the seven-year period the value of produce he raised amounted to $1,334.81. Between a third and a half of this produce was used at home.

When farmers were called upon to plant more crops this year, he put most of his land into tomatoes and carrots, the two most important vegetables listed. One acre yielded 12 tons of tomatoes, which were sold to a canning company, and the remaining acre of carrots was taken by the armed services. He is proud that all of his produce except onions, sold to wholesalers was shipped to nearby bases, such as Fort Sheridan and Glenview naval training station.

Wallace was assistant club leader this year and has been president for two years, vice president for three years and club reporter for one in addition to serving each year on committees. In addition to his club project work, he carried on the 4H safety activity and participated in first aid this year.

There will be musical selections and other features on the program. Tickets may be secured from Heisners, and Mark.

Chas. Hollwedel of Tinley Park Hurt In Auto Accident

Chas. Hollwedel, proprietor of the Saenger hall and Tavern in Tinley Park was quite seriously injured last Friday afternoon about two o'clock when the car he was driving and a large truck and trailer collided at 167th St. and Cicero Ave. The impact tore the door of the car open hurling Mr. Hollwedel onto the pavement. He suffered severe cuts, several fractured ribs, and bruises and a large gash on his head. A passing motorist stopped and took him to the Oak Forest Infirmary hospital at Oak Forest. He has been there since the accident. At latest reports he is improving nicely and is expected to come home the latter part of the week. The front end of the car was completely demolished. The truck and trailer were not damaged and it was a miracle that neither one was upset by the impact.

Mokena V.F.W. Post To Sponsor Thrilling Show

Friday, Nov. 19 is definitely set as the night of the VFW Service Show at the Mokena school auditorium, starting at 8 pm. Such talent as will be presented reads like the who's who of entertainment in the entertainment world. Nationally famous musicians from such bands as Cab Calloway, Fletcher Henderon, Duke Ellington, Count Basie are combined with famous singers, dancers, comedians all within one 40 piece Military band of the 732 Military Police Battalion of Camp Desplaines. This will be under the leadership of Sgts. Roosevelt Wysinger and Geo. Perry, both recently returned from Guadalcanal.

Think of seeing Cpls. Eddie Knox and Marvin Randolph, famous trumpeters. Nip and Tuck, top dance team, Buhala Kelly head of the comedy committee, Chop and Sam another famous novelty dance team all on one two-hour program.

These men and their organization of singers, dancers comedians are strictly upper bracket professional entertainment.

All proceeds go to the VFW Service fund which in its entirety is used to better conditions for your sons and daughters overseas. Let's pack the school auditorium at Mokena for this occasion.

Pretty Wedding Is Solemnized In Tinley Home

A pretty wedding was solemnized Saturday evening at seven o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Schilling when their daughter Paula became the bride of James Howard Bell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Bell. The Rev. Oswald Woelzlein of the Bachelor's Grove Lutheran church read the marriage ceremony before an improvised arch in the living room which was decorated in blue and white.

The bride was attractive in a gown of brocade white satin, fashioned in princess style with long fitted sleeves and a V neckline. Her only ornament was a string of pearls, a gift of the groom. Her fingertip length veil was held in place with a tiara of seed pearls and she carried a colonial bouquet. Miss Emma Schilling was her sister's bridesmaid and wore a floor length dress of powder blue taffeta and a floral ornament in her hair. Marion Bell served her brother as best man.

Following the ceremony a wedding supper was served to about 70 guests from Tinley Park, Blue Island, Algonquin; Chicago Heights; Monee, Kankakee, Peotone; Frankfort; Chicago; Hammond, Gary, Wheatfield, Ind., Mayview and Hartford, Wis.; and Pittsburg, Pa. The young couple will reside on the Ford farm east of the village.

FRANKFORT RED CROSS UNIT MAKES APPEAL FOR FUNDS

Mrs. Genn Folkers, knitting chairman of the Frankfort unit of the Red Cross has made an appeal for funds to purchase yarn for sweaters to be given to local boys who enter the services of the armed forces. The money can not be taken from the Frankfort unit as has been done in the past and it will be up to the residents of this community and their various organizations to provide the funds to support this worthy cause. At least twelve more sweaters are needed to supply those who have left recently. Containers will be placed in the stores and post office for free will offerings, and individuals or organizations wishing to contribute are asked to call Mrs. Folkers.

TINLEY SPAR GIVEN SURPRISE PARTY

A surprise party was given for Irene Lahti, in her home in Tinley, Wednesday night. She is leaving for the SPARs on Saturday, Nov. 13. When the party got in swing, each girl was appropriately given a lei and a handkerchief as favors.

Those attending the party were Margaret Andres, Marion Keuch, Lorraine Miller, Fern Mager, Velma Lorenz, Clara Steinborn, LaVerne Strassenburg and Marie Bettenhausen.

Bunco was played and prizes won by Marion Keuch, Fern Mager, LaVerne Strassenburg, Clara Steinborn and Velma Lorenz.

A very delicious buffet luncheon was served and the table was very prettily decorated in patriotic fashion with a doll Spar holding the ribbons attached to the flag. The nut cups were made by Mrs. John Swish and very appropriate.

After lunch, the hostess told the fortune of all of the girls by reading their cards. A very lovely time was had by all.

Frankfort Business Block Threatened By The Flames

Members of four volunteer fire departments fought a stiff blaze for several hours at Frankfort early Thursday morning. The fire of undetermined origin broke out in a store room adjoining the Priami Hotel on Kansas street and was discovered by Roy Koerner while he was returning home from work at 3 o'clock in the morning.

The blaze had destroyed the store house and had ignited the south portion of the hotel building. By the time the Frankfort fire department could be summoned the building was a roaring furnace. Seeing that aid would be required, the chiefs of the fire departments of Orland Park, Tinley Park and New Lenox were called and the fire-trucks of Orland and Tinley Park responded while New Lenox sent a number of their firemen to assist in fighting the fire. It required a tremendous lot of hard work to save the adjoining buildings from catching fire.

All of the south portion of the hotel building was gutted by the flames. The only section remaining untouched, was the main dining room and the ice cream parlor. These too suffered some damage from the smoke and water. The fire chief Henry Lühring of the Frankfort fire department, estimated that the loss to the building and contents is approximately $5,000. This is covered by insurance.

The early morning air was extremely cold and the water froze as it hit parts of the buildings away from the fire encrusting them with ice. The firemen's rubber coats were also ice covered. Practically the entire village responded to the fire call and the good ladies of the town got together and cooked up oodles of hot coffee and served it to the firemen.

The hotel building is an old landmark of Frankfort and was formerly under the management of Folker Bros.

Village president, George Sangmeister wishes to compliment fire chief Henry Lühring and members of the Frankfort Volunteer Fire Department for the efficient manner in which they performed this Thursday morning. Also the Tinley Park and Orland Park fire departments deserve praise as they are all volunteer units.

When Frankfort bought their new truck and re-organized their department five years ago they joined the Illinois Fire Association, which makes it possible to call these neighboring units. This fire demonstrated the importance of this arrangement.

We also want to thank the New Lenox fire department for sending some of their men to help fight the fire.

RUSSIAN RELATIONS IMPROVE
The diplomatic grapevine reports that inter-Allied relations with Russia are going pretty well now. This is certainly true on the surface, and while some irritations have occurred below the surface, both sides have shown a real tendency to try to get along.

Most serious sub-surface irritation was over the Mediterranean Council, through which Russia, the United States and Britain were to confer regarding Italy, North Africa and the Balkans.

The Russians, snubbed earlier in the summer regarding preliminary Italian armistice terms, took the Mediterranean Council seriously and appointed as their representative Andrei Vishinski, the famous prosecutor in the Russian purge trials. This was the equivalent of sending the most outstanding member of the U. S. Supreme court or the leading lawyer of England.

Vishinski is a man of national stature, capable of making Mediterranean decisions without consulting Moscow. But to represent the United States on the Mediterranean Council, Secretary Hull sent Ed Wilson, U. S. ambassador to Panama. Wilson is a thorough-going, competent diplomat who can handle any routine job and handle it well. But almost no one outside diplomacy or Panama has heard of him. He has no national stature and he cannot act on his own.

Immediately it developed that Wilson was to act as a glorified messenger and report everything back to Washington. The British representative was to do the same. In other words, Churchill and Roosevelt were to make the decisions, and the much publicized Mediterranean Council was to be a mere reporting agency.

This immediately roused Russian wrath. They had welcomed the Council, appointed a top man. So for a moment they considered withdrawing. However, for the sake of Allied harmony, they stayed on and are giving the Mediterranean Council a trial.

POOR 'PA' WATSON

Toughest job White House Secretary Maj. Gen. Edwin ("Pa") Watson of the White House secretariat has to tackle each day is keeping the President's appointment schedule on time.

Frequently FDR will sit talking to an old friend for 15 or 20 minutes over the allotted time, and that snarls the White House schedule for the rest of the day.

This is hard on the general's nervous system, especially when bigwigs from the war or navy departments are waiting to discuss military matters. On such occasions Watson is not above barging in and breaking up the conference.

The other day when the President's old friend, Governor Bob Kerr of Oklahoma, was overstaying his time—through no fault of his own—Watson walked in and began to parade nervously about the room.

"Well, here's the undertaker, Mr. President," grinned Kerr, catching the hint. "If one of your callers gets so he doesn't move, 'Pa' will move him."

Roosevelt laughingly motioned Watson to a chair.

"Sit down and talk to us for awhile, general," he said. "We're having a very interesting conversation."

With a sigh, Watson took a chair.

BACK TO NORMALCY

Industry's eagerness to get back to peacetime operation is seen in the deluge of mail received by the chemical division of WPB. Theme of every letter is: Unlace the straightjacket and give us a chance to expand.

This pressure hits the chemical division more than any other because of the tight control which that division has exercised over the industry, and also because of the tremendous future of plastics and other developments in the chemical field.

Controls are so tight that no materials may be bought or sold without clearance with WPB, and in the course of getting clearance, the applicant must state a lot of intimate facts about his business, including buying price, selling price, profit, and inventories.

The real meaning of the complaint is that the industry is not worried about paper work so much as it is worried about limitation on profits. Under government control, prices are held down by the fact that sales are limited to war needs, but when this restriction is removed, the demand for chemical materials will be terrific, and profits will go through the ceiling.

THE SANCTITY OF THE HOME

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:14; Matthew 5:27-30; Mark 10:2-12.
GOLDEN TEXT—Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God.—Matthew 5:8.

As the divinely appointed center of man's life, the home holds a place of such importance that it is the special target of Satan's offensive. That has always been true, but it seems that in recent years the onslaught against the home has been intensified.

Books, plays, movies, magazines, all contribute their filthy efforts to break down all sense of moral responsibility. Sex is magnified, and not in any useful or normal sense, but rather for the stimulating of unholy desires and purposes, the breaking down of Christian standards of living, and the ultimate prostitution of the most sacred of all human relationships to the lowest level of which animals might well be ashamed.

All this means that this lesson should be taught with a holy boldness and plainness which will make it effective for God in our homes.

We do not like to talk about adultery and related sins. We must speak with care and tact, but perhaps the time has come for some straightforward dealing with an unpleasant situation.

I. Protect the Purity of the Home (Exod. 20:14; Matt. 5:27-30).

Any violation of the divine plan for the marriage of one man and one woman, in loving communion for the founding and maintenance of the home, is a direct violation of the law of God.

It is also a violation of the law of man. It brings serious results in the destruction of the home, and in the ruin of individual life—physical, moral and spiritual.

The words of Jesus broaden the interpretation of the commandment to cover all sexual impurity in thought, word, or deed.

We are to be firm and definite in our dealing with this temptation to moral uncleanness even though it be as painful as tearing out an eye or losing a hand. The command here is not necessarily to be interpreted literally. Tearing out an eye will not help if there is lust in the heart. The point is, go to the root of the matter, and get rid of it even if it hurts. Most of us are far too easy on our sinful impulses. We dally with them when we should destroy them.

II. Recognize Marriage as a Divine Institution (Mark 10:2-8).

The Pharisees, who had devised some ingenious schemes for getting rid of an undesired wife, wanted to get Jesus involved in the question. They put him up against Moses who had allowed divorce.

Jesus made it clear that this was not in accord with God's plan and only took place because of their sinful hardness of heart.

As a proper background for the discussion of divorce He set up the divine origin of marriage. He made it clear that marriage was ordained by God, and that it involves a holy union of two individuals which makes them one.

All those who look forward to marriage should realize that it is not a casual thing, or a merely temporary legal contract. It is a union for life—be it for better or worse, in sickness or health, in prosperity or adversity. All who are married should highly regard their sacred vows.

The high place of marriage in Christian teaching dignifies that relationship and denies the misleading and destructive theories of men.

III. Follow God's Law on Divorce (Mark 10:9-12).

Failure to observe God's law in these matters may involve a person in the guilt of gross sin. This passage and others teach that divorce is to be permitted on the one ground of adultery (Matt. 5:32).

Divorce and remarriage other than on grounds permitted by God involves the parties in the sin of adultery. Men may make laws based on the civil contract of marriage which provide differently, but man cannot remove marriage from its place as a divine institution, nor can he add to or take away from God's law concerning it.

Aware, as we are, of the laxness of some branches of the church in such matters, and the almost entire lack of standards in the world, we cannot but present the plain teachings of our Lord and urge every reader to follow the commandment of God's Word.

There can be no question that divorce is a major evil in our day. Statistics are positively shocking, but they are cold and quickly forgotten. But who can fail to see, and who can forget, the awful woe brought into American home life by divorce.

Bad as it is, the awful effect on parents is nothing compared to the nervous, moral and spiritual shock which comes to children in broken homes. And that problem is everywhere.

THIS bag was planned as a gift for someone who was finding days in bed difficult enough without having books, magazines and writing materials scattered about. The bag shown here was made of a remnant of heavy cotton upholstery materials in tones of green with a touch of red in the pattern. The red was repeated in the sateen lining. The sketch gives all the dimensions and shows how the lining and the outside part were made. A coat hanger was cut down to measure 12 inches from end to end and was placed between the lining and the outside; these being stitched together around the top, as illustrated.

NOTE—This bedside bag is but one of thirty-two useful things to make for the home, that are illustrated with detailed directions in BOOK 8 of the series prepared for readers. The price of BOOK 8 is 15 cents. Send your order to:

BLACK SOMBREIRO

by CLIFFORD KNIGHT

Elsa Chatfield, Hollywood artist, is cut off from the will of her Aunt Kitty, who died from an overdose of morphine. Barry, an amateur detective, and Hunt Rogers, a professional sleuth, go to Mazatlan, Mexico, on a cruise with Margaret and Dwight Nichols. Arriving there they find that Elsa and her party had preceded them by plane. They dine at the rancho of Elsa's father, Sam Chatfield, whom Rogers questions about his visit to his sister, Kitty, on the night she died. Later Elsa is seen by Barry and Rogers evidently flying for her life on horseback. Suddenly she dismounts and James Chesebro, a mine owner, reins up. Elsa strikes him across the face with her quirt, again and again.

CHAPTER VII

But Elsa was not through with him. A moment later when her horse dropped to all four feet, she came within striking distance, and again the quirt lashed out to cut Chesebro, across the shoulders this time. Chesebro was too dignified to run from her; an upraised arm to fend off the lightninglike quirt was his only defense.

"Elsa!" I shouted, starting from our place beside the oxcart. "Elsa!" But she didn't hear me. Chesebro was now rolling along the ground, alive to his danger but as yet unable to escape the lashing whip.

"Elsa! Stop it! Stop it!" I shouted, moving rapidly down upon her, Rogers at my heels.

The rigid arm relaxed, the quirt slowly fell from her nerveless fingers, the quirt which later was to play so vital a part in our tragic story.

The rage that had stirred Elsa to a frenzy melted quickly away. Rogers released her and went to help Chesebro to his feet. Suddenly Elsa turned into my arms, soft and yielding, trembling weakly.

"Oh, Barry!" she said. A sob shook her body convulsively. "Oh, Barry—I said that someday I'd pull off his legs. But that's not enough. I'm going to kill him instead!"

Chesebro was put gently to bed in an enormous room furnished in ancient black walnut; the high ceiling and the great length and breadth of the room gave me the feeling almost of being in a cathedral.

In an incredibly short time, considering that this was Mexico, the doctor arrived.

"It is the heart, yes," he said at last, speaking English with a strong rhythmic accent. "He's had an attack; it is light, but he shall remain in bed for several days. Why the face like this?" he inquired, indicating the bruised flesh. "He did not fall on the face, no?"

"There was an argument, Doctor Cruz," Rogers replied slowly, "in which he was severely beaten. With a whip."

"Ah!" responded Doctor Cruz and shrugged his shoulders discreetly.

I went into town with the doctor when he left that early afternoon. As I explained to Hunt Rogers, it was best that someone of us sought out Reed Barton, to tell him of what had happened.

"You're coming out again, of course, for the evening?" Rogers inquired.

"Yes, I wouldn't miss a fiesta. I don't suppose Chesebro's condition will make any difference in their plans."

"I think not." George Rumble, lingering in the shade of a clump of bananas, came to life.

"I believe I'll go along with you. All right is it, Doc?" he asked of Doctor Cruz.

"You bet," responded the Mexican physician. And so we rode into town together.

Doctor Cruz dropped me a few minutes later in a side street where over a doorway let into a glaring white wall was a sign bearing Chesebro's name. It was the siesta hour, but I entered its comfortable shady interior where the heat of the day apparently had not penetrated. A youthful Mexican sitting idly at a typewriter looked up, and got quickly out of his chair.

"A sus ordenes, señor," he said. "Señor Barton; is he in?" I inquired in Spanish.

"Si, señor; por esta puerta," he said rapping gently, then opening the door into the inner office.

Reed Barton sat with his feet upon the top of his desk, smoking a cigarette, and gazing dreamily out into a small patio where a fountain dripped and a ruby throated hummingbird was busy among the flowers.

"Hello, old man," I said.

Reed took his feet from the desk, got slowly from his chair and dropped his cigarette into an ash tray. He held out his hand.

"I dropped in just now to tell you some news."

"What news?"

"I thought you ought to know about it. Chesebro's had a heart attack. The doctor has put him to bed at Sam Chatfield's."

"What brought that on?"

"Elsa beat him up quite badly with a whip a while ago; almost cut him to ribbons. The attack followed."

"Well," he said with surprisingly little show of interest, "it doesn't mean anything to me, Barry, to know about it. Thank you, though, for your trouble."

"I don't understand—" I began at this odd reception of the news I had for him.

"It really doesn't matter, Barry," he amplified. "Chesebro and I are through. We're quits. He's kicked me out of his organization. I've been sitting here resting a bit after getting my stuff together, and thinking."

"You mean you're fired?"

"Yes."

"Why—what?"

"Elsa, of course. The man is mad, Barry. About her."

That evening at the rancho is one that none of us who was present will ever forget, an evening not of full fiesta, but of gay and typical dances, the zapateados, an evening that ended so tragically.

Chesebro was lying motionless in bed. Because of the painful injuries inflicted by the lash of Elsa's whip, he did not turn his head when we came into the room, merely inquired quietly who we were.

"I'm glad you came in," he said from his pillow. "Sit down, won't you?"

"We'll not stay," Rogers told him, going up to the bedside and looking down upon the bandaged occupant. "Can we get you anything? Do any service for you, Chesebro?"

"Thank you, no. I'm all right. I'll be up and about in a few days." He rested a moment before he continued. "They are very kind to me, both Sam and Senora Chatfield. I couldn't ask more devoted, thoughtful attention."

"Oh, I'm sure you're well cared for," I said. "It was a—" I started to say something of the beating Elsa had given him, but paused, afraid to irritate his sensibilities.

Chesebro waited a moment for me to go on, then said: "I don't

She had gone mad with hatred of him.

blame Elsa. I blame only myself for having underestimated Elsa's capabilities."

"Elsa is," began Rogers, a half-humorous note in his voice, "surprisingly full of capabilities."

"Yes," said Chesebro, matter-of-factly, "that's true. But she didn't know; she couldn't have known that I was experiencing a little trouble with my heart—and I shouldn't have done what I did. You find me very contrite, gentlemen. Elsa, I'm sure, will forgive me when she comes in to see me, as I've been promised later on she will do."

We said good night and withdrew from the huge, dimly lighted room where dark shadows in the far corners could have concealed a host of evil spirits.

There was an odd, constrained silence when we entered the living room, a slight hush of expectancy and a stiffening of the occupants in the chairs. Dwight and Margaret had arrived. Rumble was there, having come out with me from town. Sam and Berta were sitting with them. Elsa had not yet made her appearance, and Reed Barton came in a moment or two after we entered. He was dressed picturesquely as a charro, the Mexican cowboy, and evidently was determined to have a part in the evening's festivities. He wore a short leather jacket, a soft red tie, long leather pantaloons as tight as he could sit down in, bespangled with silver buttons and chains.

I detected a look of disappointment in his face as he glanced around the room and did not find Elsa. Berta, dressed in black velvet and heavily rouged, coquettishly made a place for him beside herself, and indicated her husband with her fan, as if he were only waiting for the attention of all before saying something.

"I—" he began hesitantly. "I am suggesting something for this particular time—it is still early—which has nothing whatever to do with the evening's festivities. They will follow. It will come as a surprise, I know; it will seem out of place, perhaps, to some of you. But it is something that seems to be necessary."

Sam Chatfield was now well launched upon his little speech; there was earnestness upon his face, in his manner. "You all know, of course, of the death of my sister, Katherine, in California, now more than a year ago. At odd times since that occurrence there have been intimations that the authorities are not satisfied with the official findings. I discover that among you there are two who are actively prosecuting an inquiry into the circumstances surrounding Katherine's death."

"Since all of us here"—he looked around the room—"Elsa will be here shortly—knew her or had some dealings, or association of some sort, with her, I shall ask Mr. Rogers to conduct an examination. I want him, and through him the authorities in California, to be satisfied. Neither Berta nor I have been available for questioning hitherto, and I hope Mr. Rogers will not feel constrained, because we are his hosts, in questioning us. Of course, Mr. Chesebro cannot be with us, and is at present in no condition to undergo questioning, but that, perhaps, can be done later, if it has not already been done."

"Thank you, Mr. Chatfield. It is indeed a surprise. I had been hoping soon to suggest that something like this be arranged. I'm sure that Mr. Madison will be grateful for this opportunity, now that the matter is, so to speak, out in the open. Of course," he hesitated, looking intently at Sam Chatfield, "there is in the death of your sister—or, for that matter, in the death of anyone else—a set of facts. We are uncertain just what those facts are. The district attorney's office doubts the validity of what purports to be facts in the Katherine Chatfield case."

There was a stir in the doorway and Elsa entered the room, pausing on the threshold to survey us as we sat listening, solemn-faced and stiffly, as if to a schoolmaster, while Rogers talked. She was always lovely; her hair of an almost golden sheen, the level gray eyes, the firm, erect carriage which was emphasized tonight by the costume she wore. She was dressed as a China Poblana.

"Am I interrupting?" she asked from the threshold.

"No, dear; come in," said her father. "We were expecting you to join us." He made a place for her at his side.

A faint smile flitted across her face at the sight of Reed Barton, and she nodded to him, slightly aloof now, this person, who so ardently had hoped that Reed would come like a caballero and sing love songs to her on the deck of the Orizaba.

"I presume there is little need to do so, but perhaps it is best to remind you all that Katherine Chatfield died of an overdose of morphine."

At Rogers' words, Elsa, who had just sat down, lifted her head high, her nostrils opening wider as if she sniffed danger.

"The overdose probably was much in excess," continued Rogers easily, "of what she was accustomed to take. In the circumstances only two conclusions are possible. Either she administered the overdose herself, in which case it was suicide. Or, it was given to her by someone desiring her death, either forcibly, or by the aid of some preliminary anesthetic administered quickly before she was aware of her danger—such as chloroform. In which latter case, of course, it is murder."

"Mr. Chatfield quite recently told Barry Madison and me that both he and Mrs. Chatfield were spending the night at the house the night his sister died. Elsa, of course, was there. Some time ago Reed Barton informed me that, in the nature of his work for Mr. Chesebro, he ran many personal errands for him, and that on this particular evening he had been instructed to deliver a book to her."

"And I have just discovered in talking with George Rumble that he had been engaged to do some publicity work for Miss Chatfield, and that on the evening of her death he was present in the house for a short time, that the two argued, and that he left threatening to sue her for his money."

"Dwight," Rogers said, with a smile, "so far as I know, you and Margaret are the only ones here, excepting Barry Madison and myself, who have not been shown to have been present that night. How about it? Are you keeping something to yourself?"

Dwight Nichols shifted his crossed legs and tapped the ash from the tip of his cigarette.

"I believe I told you a long time ago, Hunt, that I might be accused of having a motive in Kitty Chatfield's slaying—if that's what it was. I profited to the extent of a couple of hundred thousand dollars at her death, because of some property owned in joint tenancy. But there it ends. I didn't happen to be at the house at any time that evening she died."

Danger of Fire Lurks Constantly in Barns

Hazards May Be Removed By Simple Precautions

Barns generally house the farmer's most valuable livestock, equipment and feed; yet, the barn is packed with fire hazards. But to all practical purposes, all of the major causes of barn fires can be eliminated if the farmer will practice simple precautions and be constantly vigilant. The National Fire Protection association working with the Department of Agriculture, has compiled a list of these dangers.

Cobwebs, dust and litter of all kinds should not be allowed to accumulate around fuse boxes where they may be ignited by short circuits or around high-speed machinery where sparks can set them ablaze. Knotting of electric cords is dangerous as it may be the cause of short circuits. The main switch box should also be far enough removed from the lightning rod cable so that bolts of lightning cannot jump from the cable to the switch box, short-circuiting the wiring.

Inflammable roofs often are ignited by chimney sparks, or sparks blown long distances from brush fires, bonfires or forest fires. For this reason inflammable barn roofs should be re-covered with fire-resistant materials such as asphalt shingles or asphalt roll roofing.

Lanterns should never be placed where an animal or a workman can kick them over. They should not be hung on a twine from a dusty and cobweb-covered ceiling. They should be kept away from drafts and away from any accumulations of combustible materials. It was a cow kicking over a lantern that started the great Chicago fire, according to tradition, and many a barn has been destroyed in this way.

Smoking should be prohibited in the barn at all times. It is even dangerous to light up a pipe or a cigarette on the way out the barn door, as the sparks may be blown back to ignite combustible stores inside. Workmen are also advised against carrying loose matches.

Spontaneous combustion of hay is one of the most common barn fire causes. All hay should be properly cured before being stored in the mow and should be inspected frequently for signs of heating. Roof leaks creating moisture will start the heating process in perfectly cured hay.

In addition to these precautions, fire-fighting equipment should be kept on hand at all times to tackle any blaze that breaks out despite all carefulness. Each farm should have a long ladder, hose, buckets of water and sand reserved solely for fire use, and a fire extinguisher. To be effective these things must be kept in sound condition and in a spot where they are immediately available in an emergency.

Clear Pecan Groves

Clearing low producing trees and all foreign timber from a pecan grove often may double production in a relatively short time. According to J. F. Rosborough, horticulturist for the Texas A. and M. college, this clean-up has the further benefit of aiding in the control of certain insects and diseases, and facilitating the harvesting of nuts. In all cases, however, it should be followed through with the elimination of stumps and sprouts.

For you to make

Large-Sized Vestee

THE older woman sometimes has difficulty in finding instructions to make a smart crocheted sleeveless vestee. This one was especially designed for sizes 38-40 and 42. It is comfortable, well-fitted and can be worn in the house in our winter heat-ratified rooms and is equally comfortable for outdoor wear under a heavy coat. Make it of wool sport yarn in American Beauty, navy blue, brown or dark green.

For complete crocheting instructions for the Larger Woman's Vestee (Pattern No. 5619) sizes include 38-40 and 42, send 16 cents in coins, your name and address and the pattern number.

Morning Glory Bed Linens—No. 5502

BUY some pillowcase tubing at the January white sales—embroider this lovely shaded blue and pink morning glory design on them—you'll have a springtime set of bed linens. All done in easy cross stitch.

Robot Radio Operator

The lives of many torpedoed seamen may be saved by a new invention.

It is an automatic wireless transmitter. The ship's name and code mark are inscribed on a film, and the vessel's position is inserted on the film as often as conditions demand.

When a vessel is torpedoed or mined, the transmitter comes into action and continues to send out the ship's name as long as the ship remains afloat without the radio operator standing by. The inventor is Captain Espeseth, a Norwegian seaman.

To obtain transfer designs for two pillowcases and extra design for bedsheet of Morning Glory Cross Stitch (Pattern No. 5502) send 16 cents in coins, your name and address, and the pattern number.

Dear Friends:

I have moved from Del-Monte Pre Flight school this past week and am now located at Primary flight training here in Hutchinson, Kans. Here we are to receive about 100 hours of flying in biplanes which have 220 horse power engines. We learn all of our aerobatics here and also have some night flying and cross country hops. The food here has really been tops so far. We have a good deal more liberty than we have had as we work 10 days straight and then have 2 days liberty.

I have been receiving the Tinley Times regularly. Thanks a million. A-c Donald A. Boerner, USRR Class 10A L-1 Brks. 312, US Naval Air Station Hutchinson, Kansas

Dear Folks:

I just want to drop you a line to thank you for the cigarettes. I have received two packages containing cigarettes within the past two weeks. Thanks very much. I sure do appreciate them. Incidentally, the Tinley Park Times is still coming thru. Sometimes they are a little old when they arrive, but nevertheless they are most welcome. Its good to read about the home town news and the other fellows in the service.

I received a letter from Harry. Uthe about two weeks ago. He is located down around here too. We have been on the lookout for each other but so far no luck. It would be mighty nice to see some one from home again.

We have moved to a new location here on the Island at present we are not admitting patients, for the hospital is not completed. We are clearing the brush etc. from the area and helping anyway we can to hurry things along. We have been having some very good movies of late and in the past months four USO shows have performed here. That's about all the news from here. Thanks again for the cigarettes.

Yours
S-Sgt. Howard Mager, 71st Sta. Hdq. APO 913 San Francisco, Cal.

Dear Friends:

I'm sorry I didn't write sooner but have been kept very busy everyday and with KP once in awhile on Sundays don't seem to have much spare time. I've been receiving the Tinley Park Times very regularly and enjoy reading about the happenings from home.

I also enjoy the letters from the boys in service. And want to send them my regards. May I also say, hello to all my friends in Tinley, and hope we will be able to be back together before too long a time.

The camp here is quite a nice place and a fellow really gets lots of good training. I'll close now with luck to all.

As ever,
Pvt. Paul Nielsen, ASN 36684136 Co. B, 11 AKTC Fort Knox. Ky.

$164,000 Bequest

Because of the affection developed during the time she was a student and during seven years following as a member of the University of Illinois faculty, the University of Illinois Foundation has just acquired an estate exceeding $164,000 from the bequest of the late Mrs. Annetta Ayers Saunders of Chicago, it was announced in Urbana-Champaign.

Mrs. Saunders graduated in 1884 and from 1886 thru 1893 served as an assistant to Thomas Jonathan Burrill, Professor of Botany and one of the most eminent scientists of his time. While working with him she developed the process of making colored slides by which it was possible to isolate plant diseases not before identifiable.

After leaving the University she moved to Chicago to study medicine and married Dr. Charles B. Saunders. Both practiced medicine for years at 919 North LaSalle Street.

When Mrs. Saunders died in 1938 she left her residence property to the University Foundation and her will provided that upon the death of a nephew, Chilton Ayers Powers of Hollywood, Cal., the residue of the estate should go to the University Foundation. The nephew died as a result of injuries sustained in teaching Navy personnel how to use jujitsu to break death grips.

James C. Colvin Secretary of the University Foundation announced that the principal would be kept intact and only the income used for Foundation purposes.

Our boys must keep on fighting—we must keep on buying WAR BONDS until victory is won. Keep on BACKING THE ATTACK.

Raising Fund To Buy Lincoln Relic

A campaign of school children of Illinois to raise $60,000 for the purchase of Abraham Lincoln's Gettysburg Address as a gift for the people of the state has been started with help from communities and individuals as widely separated as Enid, Oklahoma and Columbus, Ohio.

It is the intention of Vernon L. Nickell, state superintendent of public instruction, to have the state's school children acquire the treasured document with their pennies and nickels.

County superintendents, principals and teachers have given enthusiastic endorsement to the campaign which reaches its climax November 19, the 80th anniversary of the delivery of the address at Gettysburg, Pa. national cemetery. The manuscript at present safeguarded in the vault of a Chicago loop bank, will be turned over to the State Historical Library on November 19.

A WANT AD IN THIS NEWSPAPER

To Save Manpower, Transportation, Critical Materials and Fuel...

conserve Gas!

Your Government makes this request... asking your cooperation in a voluntary program instituted by the War Production Board, Office of Defense Transportation, Petroleum Administration for War, Solid Fuel Administration for War, and Office of War Utilities.

Here's the most important way to conserve gas

Turn down the thermostat—Keep it set at the lowest possible comfortable temperature, preferably at 65 degrees. Also set the temperature down to 55 degrees at night, and when you are away. In homes where there is illness or the comfort of elderly people to be considered, higher temperatures may be necessary. However, each degree that you lower the temperature will make a worth-while saving in the fuel used!

SIX ADDITIONAL WAYS TO CONSERVE GAS

Unused rooms—have radiators disconnected in unused rooms, keep doors to these rooms closed. Weather-strip door to prevent heat waste.

Insulate throughout—insulate the attic and side-walls if possible. It will cut fuel usage 15% or more by preventing much heat waste.

Install storm sash—put storm sashes on every door and window. They'll save enough fuel over a period of time to pay for themselves.

Weather-strip—wherever you do not have storm windows, apply weather-stripping. Window and door cracks waste heat, waste fuel.

Insulate pipes—all exposed hot water or steam pipes, as well as your boiler or hot water tank, should be insulated to reduce heat loss.

Close the garage—shut off and disconnect heat supply to the garage to conserve heat and fuel for living quarters. Keep doors closed.

Gas has gone to war — don't waste it!

Moving the date up one week on account of Thanksgiving, the Women's Guild of St. Peter's Ev. and Ref. church will meet Thursday, November 18. A program has been planned for both the business and devotional meeting held in the afternoon and for the social hour to follow the supper served by the following committee: Mrs. Wm. Wischover, chairman, Mrs. Gilbert Voss, Mrs. Edward Warning, Mrs. Fred Weischelberger, Mrs. John Weiten-dorf, Mrs. Harry Hafka, Mrs. B. A. Zechlin, Mrs. George Waldvogel, Mrs. August Weber, and Mrs. Mary Nagel. Mrs. Walter Pfaff and Mrs. Emanuel Engelman are in charge of the program which will include a play and numbers by the children.

Dr. A. Ebricht, a returned missionary from India, will speak at the Frankfort Methodist church Sunday morning, at 9:30 o'clock and at the Green Garden Methodist church at 10:45 a. m. His subject will be "The Challenge of India". Rev. A. Malek extends a welcome to the entire family to come and hear this outstanding speaker.

Fourteen members of the Green Garden Youth Fellowship and fifteen members of the Frankfort Methodist Youth Fellowship attended the Subdistrict Rally held at the Richards St. Methodist church, Joliet, Sunday afternoon and evening. Officers were elected with Miss Betty Mark being named president of the first commission on worship and Evangelism. During the afternoon classes were held for the various commissions. Miss Mark, elected this summer by the conference council, led a class on the topic of "World Friendship". After supper was served the group enjoyed singing and recreation. The devotion service included the installation of officers. Attending from Frankfort were: Rev. and Mrs. Rudolf Malek, Misses Betty and Wilma Mark, Milton Mark, Roger and Alan Hedges, Clair Warning, Walter Carlson, Misses Harriet Baade, Dorothy Mager, Dorothy and Lorraine Bettenhausen, Phyllis Koenig and Leslie Koenig.

The following officers were elected at the business meeting of the WSCS of the Frankfort Methodist church Thursday afternoon: President, Mrs. Amanda Mark; Vice-president, Mrs. Frank Heisner; Sec., Mrs. Walter Carlson; Corresponding Sec., Mrs. W. V. Hedges; Treas., Mrs. Blanche Mitchell; Spiritual Life Chairmen, Mrs. John Clark and Mrs. Geo. Andrew; Missionary Chairmen, Mrs. John Reed and Mrs. Mina Malek; Christian Social relationship and Social activities, Mrs. Raymond Warning; Sec., of Girls and children work, Mrs. Otto Heisner; Sec., of Student work, Literature and Supplies, Mrs. Paul Mark. Plans were completed for the annual Father and Sons banquet to be held November 19.

Devotions were led by Mrs. Clark and Mrs. Charles Mark, the topic being "Strength for Our Task". Mrs. W. V. Hedges and Mrs. Lillie Hershbach served refreshments. The December meeting will be held on Thursday, the 2nd starting at 12:30 p. m. with a pot luck luncheon. The kitchen committee is Mrs. Hershbach, Mrs. Reed and Mrs. Knutson. The dining room committee is Mrs. Clarence Warning, Mrs. Clar. Schroth and Mrs. Ervin Schellhase. There will be a 50c gift exchange.

The regular business and social meeting of the Methodist Youth Fellowship was held in the church Thursday evening. Games were played and refreshments were served. New members were Henry Heisner, Roger and Allan Hedges and Claire Warning. Plans were made to serve a corn fritter supper next month.

Members of the Martha Sewing Circle of St. Peter's church spent all day Thursday sewing in the home of Mrs. Erich Bizer. Luncheon was served by Mrs. Bizer and Mrs. Arthur Reese. Mrs. Albert Minger presided at the business meeting. Fourteen members were present.

Petty officer 3c, Evelyn Bruggeman, a member of the WAVES, arrived Monday from Oklahoma to spend a furlough in the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Bruggeman. Several parties have been planned in her honor, the first a dinner last Wednesday evening in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Batson where guests were Mr. and Mrs. Bruggeman; Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand Scheer Rev. and Mrs. Erich Bizer son Arnold; Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Dorband of Blue Island. Later in the evening callers were Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Voll-rath; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Scheer; Mr. and Mrs. Orval Schroeder and Miss Viola Lankenau. Thursday was spent in Joliet visiting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bruggeman and with her cousin John Henry Weiten-dorf. On Friday Miss Bruggeman visited friends in Chicago and was the guest of honor at a dinner in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Voss on Saturday.

For the first time since his departure two years ago, Pvt. Raymond W. Smith is spending a furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Homer Smith. He had been stationed in Alaska. Sunday his aunt Mrs. Margaret Jarchow of Joliet gave a dinner for him and her son, Corp. Robert Jarchow of Louisiana. He spent Thursday visiting his brother Harold in Joliet and Saturday Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Marti entertained in his honor. Several other parties have been planned before he will return to duty on November 17.

Pvt. Howard Hansen of Nashville, Tennessee is visiting in the home of his cousin Mrs. Blanche Mitchell.

Mrs. Rebecca LaHue, quietly celebrated her 94th birthday anniversary Friday, November 5. She is in good health.

Mrs. Ervin Schellhase is somewhat improved in Silver Cross hospital following three blood transfusions. Donors were her husband, L. Rodenberg and Mrs. Clarence Warning.

Helen Howell returned Saturday from Silver Cross hospital where she underwent an operation last week.

Mrs. Ray Osmus daughter Beverly of Jackson, Michigan and Mrs. Le-verne Braun, daughter Karen Lynn visited Sunday in the homes of Mr. and Mrs. Burnett Schram and Mrs. Henry Geuther, Sr.

Mrs. Edw. Vollrath, oracle presided at the meeting and reported on the district convention held last month in Joliet. Recorder Mrs. Bertha Nieland read the minutes of the last meeting and called the roll of officers. Mrs. Fred Kohlhaugen, receiver read the financial report. Mrs. Walter Hanack told about the Christmas packages which were sent to sons of members in the armed forces. Another star was added to the camp's service flag in honor of a member Howard Lenhardt, who is stationed at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station.

Following the meeting a social hour was spent at cards. Honors for scores in pinochle went to Mrs. Lester Holl of Joliet, Mrs. Edw. Warning and Mrs. Clark Bennett. Refreshments were served by the hostesses Mrs. John Weiten-dorf, Mrs. Orval Schroeder and Mrs. Arthur Lambrecht. The next meeting will be held Thursday, Dec. 2, at 6:30 pm when a pot luck supper and Christmas gift exchange will be featured. The committee in charge of the party are Mrs. Walter Pfaff, Mrs. Ralph Nieland, Mrs. Edw. Warning and Miss Annette Kohlhaugen.

The regular monthly meeting of the Green Garden F Men will be held tonight at the Town hall.

The Frankfort Woman's club will meet Wednesday, Nov. 17 at 1 p. m. at the school auditorium where they will work with the Red Cross.

It was suggested at the village board meeting Monday evening that the condemned building recently vacated by the Highley family, be boarded up against trespassers until further disposition of the property can be made.

Dog owners are again reminded to keep their pets at home since complaints have been made and lives of animals have been threatened. This warning comes from village president Geo. Sangmeister.

New names of men in the service of our country are about to be added to the honor roll at the village hall.

Other routine business was transacted. The next meeting will be Dec. 6.

Mrs. Wm. Hansen was hostess at a miscellaneous shower given at her home Tuesday evening in honor of Miss Paula Shrilig, who on Saturday became the bride of James Howard Bell. Luncheon was played at six tables with honors for scores going to the bride elect, Miss Isabelle Harming and Mrs. Wm. Emporer. Decorations were in pink and blue. Refreshments were served at quartette tables.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Neiland, Mr. and Mrs. Bernett Schramm, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hartong of Chicago, and Mr. and Mrs. David Hennesy of Joliet spent Sunday evening dancing at the Trionon at Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Heisner and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Breidert were dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edw. Bettenhausen Sunday.

At Thursday's meeting of Frankfort Camp No. 6036 RNA, members decided to sponsor individual card parties on the afternoon and evening of Tuesday, November 30. Since social gatherings are prohibited at the village hall in order to conserve fuel oil, plans for a public card party will instead invite a group of players to her home. At the end of the evening after eight games of pinochle are played and refreshments are served, hostesses will telephone the scores to Mrs. Walter Pfaff chairman. Holders of the two highest scores will be presented with an award.

Dear Folks:

On my return from work this evening I was once again most pleasantly surprised in finding your very nice Christmas present. I must say that you are very well informed as to just what the average fellow likes and what is more the point, you seem to know just what we have difficulty in getting.

The thing that has really impressed me is how faithful you are in remembering a fellow and letting him know that he is not forgotten. You see I actually know very few of you personally. That is my big regret and when I return I will remedy that. But you have been as thoughtful as if I were very well known back there to you all. Last Christmas I received your very nice present and then shortly thereafter I started to receive the News-Bulletin of Mokena, and I had to guess that you were the ones to whom I was grateful because it is very nice to receive the news from home. I do know that you are certainly accomplishing your purpose of making the boys feel that their work is not in vain or un-appreciated and in doing that you certainly are boosting their spirits. In closing I would like to say once again that it was nice to get your gift, as evidence that there are still kind, thoughtful people who still aren't too busy to do something for someone else.

Thanks so very much,
Tech. Sgt. Louis Griffin,

The infant daughter of Pvt. and Mrs. LaVerne Braun was baptized on Sunday morning at 9 o'clock in the home of its grandparents Mr. and Mrs. Emil Braun. The name given was Karen Lynn. Sponsors were: Mrs. Ray Osmus and Emil Braun. Rev. James Manz officiated at the ceremony.

Rev. Father Reinholdt was called away Friday to St. Louis because of the sudden death of his uncle.

Miss Francis Washam, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Rowlett and Donald L. Osmus, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edw. A. Osmus were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Rectory of St. John's Catholic church at Joliet with the Rev. Father Constantine Bach officiating. The attendants were their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Osmus and Mr. and Mrs. Rowlett. The wedding day also marked the 17th birthday of the bride. She wore a blue crepe street length dress with matching jacket and black accessories.

Christmas Gifts and Cards on Time

Always a serious problem, "will be more than a problem this year, it will be an impossibility, unless Christmas mailings are made largely in November," Postmaster General Frank C. Walker warned today.

"Transportation facilities are burdened to the limit with war materials and personnel, and the Postal Service has sent more than thirty-one thousand experienced employees into the Army and Navy," Mr. Walker said. "The only solution to the Christmas problem is: Mail in November. Mark your parcels, Do Not Open Until Christmas. That is the only way to avoid disappointment on Christmas Day not only for many civilians but also for millions of members of the armed forces who are still in this country."

"It is also the only way to avoid the possibility of a Christmas emergency in the transportation and postal services. If the public will cooperate by mailing their Christmas parcels during November, we can handle a small volume of light, last minute mailings, such as cards, up to December 10, but we can do that and avoid an emergency only if November is really 'Christmas mailing Month.'"

Postal officials pointed out that the volume of mail now is far above any previous records, that railway cars by the hundreds have been diverted to war service and that the air lines have only about half as many planes as they once operated.

More than two hundred thousand extra temporary employees normally are employed to help with the holiday postal rush. This year, the extra employees will be largely women and high school boys and girls who are unable to work the long hours usually required and whose work will be relatively slow.

To deliver the Christmas mails on time, therefore, it is necessary that mailings be spread out over a longer period so that available transportation equipment and postal personnel can be used during more weeks. It will be utterly impossible to make the deliveries by Christmas if mailers wait until the last three weeks before the holiday, as in normal years.

There is another reason for shopping and mailing earlier than ever before. Retail stores are short-handed. Purchasers can avoid shopping in crowded stores, long waits for service and other inconveniences of late shopping if they buy now. They will also doubtless have a better choice of merchandise than will be available later.

Postmaster General Walker observed that his warning is not an attempt to tell the public what to do, it is only an advance notification of what will happen if they mail late. He feels that the public is entitled to the facts, and that when they know them, they will decide to Mail in November.

WOMEN'S SERVICE NEWS

by Mrs. Leslie Clark
The final packing of the Christmas boxes will be done on Monday evening, November 15 in the school, all members are asked to come and help as there are nearly 80 boxes to be packed.

Word has been received by the families of Pfc. Robert Frisch, Pvt. Kurt Hellmuth and Pvt. Frederick Clark that they have landed safely somewhere in the British Isles. The boys have been with the same division since they left to get for active duty 14 months ago.

Pfc. Charles Hostert has been transferred to Rantoul, Ill.

The following letter was received from one of our boys stationed at Camp Adair, Oregon:

"To the Women's Service Club:
I want to thank all of you for that nice package that was sent to me for my birthday. Everything was in that package that a Soldier really needs.

It also gives me a great pleasure to know that the Women's Service Club of Mokena are thinking of us soldiers who are so far away from home. It makes me feel just like I was at home to receive a package from all of you. I want to thank you from the bottom of my heart for all you have done for me.

Sincerely yours,
Louis W. Colclasure.

Word comes that Clifford Mahoney is improving very splendidly in the Will County sanitarium.

Mokena State Bank team held onto their lead when they defeated the Mokena Oilers for three games, the second place V-Eighters kept pace by sweeping three games from the Smokers. Robinson's Tavern took possession of third place by taking two games from the Paperhangers. All the teams were off form as most of the bowlers dropped pins in the individual standings.

The powerful Oilers showed a complete reversal of form as all five men fell far below their average. Looks like the team hasn't changed their oil for winter bowling. Even Gus Braun's Smokers lost their smoke that they had the past two weeks so it looks like they better get their stokers going.

Mrs. L. G. Bruder attended a meeting Monday in Villa Park of the DuPage County Federation of Republican Women's Clubs presided over by Mrs. Pearl A. Duncan, president.

Instruction and discussion on pending legislation was the main idea on the afternoon program.

A speaker from the Women's Trade Union presented the opposing side of the Equal Right bill and two speakers, pro and con—presented the issues on the Federal School bill.

Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neill, our State Representative and Mrs. J. H. Hunt, state president of the Federation, conducted a question box on "Nationalism vs. Internationalism."

The meeting of the Orland Park PTA originally scheduled for Nov. 11 but deferred because of that date being Armistice Day, will be held in the School Library on Thursday evening, Nov. 18. Because National Book week is being observed all over the country, during this month, the program will be built around that theme. There will be a display of the new books recently added to the school library and also an exhibition of books of the "way back when" days. Every member who has some old, rare or interesting volume is urged to bring it to the meeting. The members will be given a real treat as Mrs. Roxie Brown has consented to present one of her ever excellent book reviews. Mrs. Brown's reviews are always thorough, enlightening and interesting and all members of the association are urged to take advantage of this opportunity to hear her presentation. This invitation is also extended to all folks in the community. Refreshments will be served as usual.

Because the regular meeting night of the Royal Neighbors falls on Thanksgiving Day, the meeting date has been advanced to Thursday, Nov. 18. Inasmuch as the PTA had previously arranged for an interesting program for that evening, the Royal Neighbors will meet in the Legion Hall at 1:30 pm. instead of in the evening. There will be an initiation of candidates and Mrs. Carrie Kreiger, District Supervisor will be at the meeting which all members are urged to attend. Don't forget the contest is on for attendance be you on the Purple or White side, make an effort to attend the meeting.

The Oracle Sylvia Stigers, has called a meeting of all the officers for a practice, on Tuesday, Nov. 16 at 2 pm in the Legion Hall.

MUSTEROLE

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Ceylon, Africa and tropical America are expected to provide the U. S. with 54,000 long tons of crude rubber during 1943. In 1939, it is estimated, 499,473 long tons of crude were imported by this country.

Para, Brazil, was the first great rubber center. Founded in 1615, it became an important port for foreign trade about 1775. A hundred years later it was the rubber capital of the world.

Rubber obtained from a native wild vine in the Belgian Congo made Leopold II of Belgium wealthy during the 1890-1910 period. Plantation rubber development killed the Congo vine boom.

JUST what will happen to football through November is anybody's guess. But there will be many vital changes from October strength. All leading college teams today get the better part of their strength from naval entries. Many of these, some of them leading stars, will graduate soon—some time late this month.

For one example, Bertelli leaves Notre Dame, and his loss will be no small blow in working the T-formation where Frank Leahy's star is one of the masters.

A fine passer and a deft handler of the ball are needed badly in the proper operation of this attack and there are not many, if any, Bertelli around to fill the gap.

The first fall examinations are over now, and this may mean a heavy scattering of talent down the stretch. There are some good teams left, especially Army and Navy, Notre Dame and Pennsylvania.

And these latter two may be weakened before too long. Just what will happen to Duke, North Carolina, Southern California, Washington, College of the Pacific, Texas and Southwestern, all among the stronger squads, remains another unguessable guess. Just at this point the navy itself isn't sure.

These departures from one campus or another can make an important difference for many teams.

Only a marvelous bunch of soothsayers will be able to take care of the November football program down the stretch.

Two Teams to Watch

None of this involves Lieut. Col. Red Blaik's Army team at West Point, nor Capt. Johnny Whelchel's Navy team at Annapolis.

They will remain intact, and they were nothing to push around anyway.

For Army and Navy have had two of the best football squads in the country—not tossing aside Notre Dame.

I happen to know that Frank Leahy has figured from the start that Army and Navy were his two hardest contests, not overlooking Michigan.

Frank Leahy is one of the best coaches in the game. He appreciates the value of speed. He knows that a year ago if Dippy Evans had been in there to play, Notre Dame would have known an unbeaten season.

For Dippy Evans, a great back, was the real key to his T-formation. A year ago Leahy had no fast, breakaway back. This also handicapped Bertelli.

It has been all different this season. Notre Dame has had at least two fast breakaway backs to support Bertelli, Mello and others. One of these is a fellow by the name of Creighton Miller.

Just what will happen when Notre Dame loses Bertelli is another guess when it comes to operating the T-formation.

Bertelli has been the vital cog in this formation.

Just what Lujack, or some one else can do in Bertelli's place against rough and rugged competition, remains to be seen.

There will be time enough to look this situation over when the clock rolls around.

The Bowl Games

One of the main mysteries of football this fall concerns November's stretch and just how the various New Year's Day Bowl games will be worked out.

There are four major bowl games, requiring eight teams to fill up the various menus from Los Angeles to Miami, via Dallas and New Orleans. Here are the leading available bowl entries so far—

West Coast—Southern California, College of the Pacific and Washington.

Southwest—Southwestern, Texas and Texas A. and M.

South—Duke and North Carolina.

Midwest—None who will indulge in bowl parties.

East—Pennsylvania a doubtful possibility. Army and Navy won't go.

There have been dizzy scrambles before to get the choice cuts. This next one will be even dizzier than usual.

Should teams be judged on what they were in September and October or what they might be by the end of November?

The Pro Campaign

The pro football season of 1943 has picked up, after a remembered fashion, just about where it left off a year ago.

It is still a matter of the western clubs heading off Chicago's Bears in the West—with the eastern delegation checking Washington's Redskins.

These are still the two clubs to surround and cut down if there is to be any change in the next championship game, meaning East versus West.

BACK in 1939, when Amos Alonzo Stagg was entering his 50th year of coaching, a widely read sports writer had this to say:

"When his record-breaking coaching service at the University of Chicago was ended by compulsory retirement in 1933, Stagg characteristically refused to quit the game and is rounding out his career in the comparative obscurity of a small campus at the College of the Pacific at Stockton, Calif., a city of 47,000, where he is regarded as the first citizen."

At 81, Stagg unquestionably is the first citizen of Stockton. But if he is obscure, so is the sun on a cloudless Fourth of July. His "obscurity" is on a nation-wide basis.

Life Begins at 71

Ten years ago Stagg decided that life for him as a football coach would begin at 71. This season the oldest gridiron warrior of them all is confusing the opposition with one of his best teams. His College of the Pacific cific squad won its first four games, losing the fifth, a heartbreaker, to unbeaten Southern California by a close 6-0 margin.

College of the Pacific, until now little known athletically outside its own Far Western conference, in 1932 offered Stagg a lifetime coaching berth. Stagg put Pacific on the sports map, and today in his 11th season and his 54th year of coaching he directs a team that beat St. Mary's Navy Pre-Flight, the University of California at Los Angeles, the University of California, and the Alameda Coast Guard before losing to Southern California.

What accounts for Stagg's amazing success this year? Good material is part of the answer. The navy transferred some outstanding backfield talent, including several St. Mary's College players headed by Pass Thrower John Podesto.

But a large share of the credit goes to the "Stagg system." He copies from no other coach. He conceived the flanker at Chicago in 1918 and it is a vital part of today's system. He is using some of his oldest stuff, with a few new twists, to trick his opponents.

The Development

Stagg's "oldest stuff" is really well seasoned. The Grand Old Man of the game watched football develop from the kicking stage to the carrying stage to the passing stage.

He recalls the 15-man team and the era when the center—then called the "snapperback"—had to pass the ball with his foot. There was the celebrated "maul in goal," when the runner and tackler might wrestle for 10 or 15 minutes over getting the ball grounded for a touchdown.

He saw the origin of the term "gridiron." The term was first used when the field was marked off in parallel stripes. He witnessed the introduction of interference, once strictly forbidden, and of the revolutionary forward pass.

Stagg was playing with Yale when slugging was abolished. His was the day of superschedules. His 1894 squad played 22 games. He coached during the period when indoor football was popular.

Inventions

In 1889 Stagg invented the tackling dummy. He was a member of the first team to use numerical signals. He was the first man to have the quarterback receive the ball. His fake kicks always have been a headache to opponents. The tackles-back and turtle-back plays, famous in their day, were his own inventions. His applications of the forward pass contributed much to ground gaining strategy. He was the first coach to number players for the spectators' convenience.

Stagg first coached at YMCA college at Springfield, Mass., during the time he was a student there. That was 54 years ago.

Today Stagg is still out on the field in Stockton, turning out a great football team. Sports followers who had heard little of Pacific until this year took his recent defeat to heart. They wanted the Old Man to win. More than any other coach he symbolizes football at its best.

An undefeated season would have meant a great deal to Stagg, but defeat doesn't lessen his overwhelming pride in his boys.

The Private Papers Of a Cub Reporter

Not long ago I lost a friend. . . Ben Bernie died. . . Many people liked Ben Bernie. . . Because Ben Bernie liked many people. . . Ben had more than acting talent. . . The fact is—the easy good nature known to millions of Americans was not an act. . . A human being himself, he really loved his fellowmen.

Ben Bernie's life was an example of the opportunity America offers a son of poor immigrant parents. And his death is an example of the devotion these Americans have for their country.

Ben was warned by his doctors that his bond drive engagements and his many, many appearances at Army camps and war plants were too much for his strength. . . But Ben kept on. . . And he died.

How much his bit helped cannot, of course, be measured. . . But this we know. He continued in the fight against the orders of Government authorities, his doctors and the entreaties of his family. . . And now his effort is ended. . . Because over and beyond the call of duty, Ben Bernie tried to give his country more than he had.

Our "feud" with Ben Bernie started in 1931. . . The sponsor of the cigarette firm for which I rode the Magic Carpet (with orchestras from all over the world) suggested that the show needed some humor. . . I borrowed an old stunt that worked so well with Mark Hellinger with whom I "feuded." . . Phoning Ben at the College Inn in Chicago, I told him that on the next broadcast I was going to read a telegram from him. . . It was for the orchestra leader (Duchin) and it said: "Just heard first broadcast with Winchell. You were wonderful! Can get you $5,000 at State-Lake Theater with Winchell and $10,000 WITHOUT him!" . . . I told Ben I would then tell one on him—and from that date on—every man for himself! . . . Swell, he said, go ahead. . . And you know the rest. . . Anyway, that's how it started.

Robert Ley, the Nazi party's problem drunk, got sober enough the other day to have a good scare. He began to sort of realize that it's getting down toward the pay-off, and things aren't looking too good for him. . . To save his skin he tossed the Nazi master race theory into the ascan. . . That was just campaign stuff, he scoffed, and shouldn't be taken seriously. We're all good fellows together, he orated, and we're just loving everybody to pieces. . . It happens that lush Ley is head of the Nazis' labor dept., and from where he sits he can get a worse set of d.t.s than he ever collected from schnapps. . . He knows that there are 12,000,000 prisoners of labor in the Reich, and 12,000,000 able-bodied enemies represent a lot of hell when the time comes to raise it.

The big weakness of Ley's scheme is that the soldiers are going to bring in their own accusations. . . They saw the Nazi idea at work in Italy, frinstance. . . Farnsworth Folwell and John Lardner reported the butcheries of the ex-master race at Cajazzo, and if that crime isn't avenged, then victory will lack something. . . This wasn't war. It was massacre for Nazi pleasure.

The Nazis evacuated the town, then sneaked back and slaughtered whole families, women and children included—especially women and children. . . As Lardner points out, it lacked even the excuse of a lynching frenzy. It was methodical. It was more than two miles over hilly country between them and the victims' homes. . . The Huns marched the distance because they enjoyed killing the helpless. It was a crime so incredibly horrible that Folwell didn't dare broadcast it until he checked and double-checked it.

An acquaintance would have you believe he went into a restaurant which advertised: "We Serve Everything!" and heard a drunk tease the manager with: "Everything, eh? Well, bring me an elephant steak!"

The manager countered: "Very well—how many in your party?" "One, me!" said the lush. . . "Sorry," was the tactful retort, "we can't kill a whole elephant for just one customer!" . . . The beer shortage will be ended soon. An important midwest brewer has a new patented formula and process, and will accept all orders starting December 1.

Quiz Kid Joel Kupperman will do a second film for Republic Pictures—at $3,000 per week. His first for Universal got $2,000. The contract will eventually get him 5 Gs per.

In the early Summer of '41, the U. S. Army General Staff informed the State Dep't of the desperate state of U. S. preparedness. There were many conferences between Gen. Marshall and Asst Sec'y of State Berle in the gravest possible time.

Shortly after one of these meetings a Senator called upon Berle. "What possible excuse is there for selling gasoline to Japan?" he demanded. . . "Confidentially, Senator," said Mr. Berle, "the chips are down in the East. We're not selling gas now—we're buying time!"

For Every Day.

MAKE this dress up for every day service—you'll not get tired of it after constant wear. The pleasing bodice has just enough detail to make it always interesting.

Pattern No. 8499 is in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38, short sleeves, requires 4 1/2 yards 35-inch material.

Hugs Waist.

THE princess dress has a way of hugging the waistline which turns out to be most flattering. Furthermore, the skirt, widening out at the hem, swirls as you dance. Could anything be more perfect?

Pattern No. 8314 is in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20. Size 14, short or 3/4 sleeves, requires 4 1/2 yards 39-inch material.

After yarn has been steamed for removing kinks, wind it on a cake rack. It is not only easier to handle that way, but can readily be hung on the line to dry.

Make a sauce for cottage pudding out of left-over fruit juice by dissolving cornstarch in cold water and adding it to the fruit juice and cooking it for a few minutes.

Rub salt inside a fowl before adding stuffing for better seasoning.

Grape juice frosting is delicious and different. Put three tablespoons grape juice into a pint bowl, then stir in 1 to 1 1/2 cups of confectioner's sugar till mixture is thick enough to spread on your cake.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!
